Forensic Faith: A Homicide Detective Makes the Case for a More Reasonable, Evidential Christian Faith (Pages 31-58)

In a culture that is increasingly suspicious of Christianity and increasingly evidential, we as believers need to be ready to accept our public duty as _____ of Jesus Christ as we accept our personal calling as members of the Christian family. We either need to decide our Christian affiliation is unimportant to us or critically important to us. We'll never succeed if we take a _____ approach. (Page 33)

We are not only to love God with all our heart, soul, and might, but we are also commanded to use our _____ and our _____ to understand the truth of Christianity. This effort is an act of worship. (Page 34)

God sovereignly calls us to Himself, communicating His truth with direct _____. Blessed are we who did not see and yet believed the _____ of the eyewitnesses. (Page 50)

Peter was unequivocal in his directive to these Christ followers. Unlike Paul, who clearly said not everyone is an evangelist, Peter made a point to say everyone must be a _____, particularly when living in a hostile environment. Peter's words apply to all of us. It's time for each and every one of us to accept our duty and calling as Christian _____ . (Page 58)
